A SONG OF PROPHECY.

This song fell on my ears what time
I heard the bells of midnight chime;

"I, who come with hands well laden,
With gifts for tha far and the near,
For prophet and priest, for saga and maiden
I am the glad New Year.

Listen, O world, to the song I sing you—
Sweeter music can never be—
Open your hands to the good I bring you,
Open your souls to my prophecy.

"Wonderful ships that, long belated,
Have drifted the wide sea o'er,
With blessings for which the world has waited,
Shall speedily find your shore.
Tha dreamer shall walk in fields elysian,
Right shall be lord of wrong.
The seer shall give you his truest vision,
And the singer his sweetest song.

"Such treasures as never were mined or minted
Shall come to tha waiting hands;
Beauty and truth and love anointed
Shall brighten and bless the lands
Noble thonghts to brava deeds growing
Shall sea true victories won;
The perfect fruit of patient sowing
Shall ripen beneath my sun.

"A sigh, if you will, for the king departed,
(In tha song let this sigh be drowned)
Than lift your eyes, all happy hearted,
To me, the kind new-crowned.
In sweet allegiance swift and willing,
O, world, clasp hands with me;
Help, I pray, to the best fulfilling
Of promise and prophecy."

This song fell on my ears what time
I heard the bells of midnight chime.
I dare not say, nor yet deny,
That tima the words will verify,
But this I know, 'tis well to clasp
The hands of hope in daily grasp;
'Tis well e'en when we sop on sorrows
To dream of fair and glad to-morrows.

Hail, then, to him whose reign must be
Blessing or bane from sea to sea!
Hail him gladly, O world, and bring
Your pledge of faith to tha new-crowned king!
With eager feet to the purer height,
Walk in his promised broader light;
Seek the gleam in tha dim afar,
Of his whitest sail, of his brightest star;
With love and faith, while tha glad bells chime
Hail him, this latest child of time!

CARLOTTA PERRY.

CRUTCHY.

A Story of Two New Years.

BY EVA BESR.

"Buy my last paper, 'm?" The voice has the tremulous quaver of mendicant, and moves me not a whit. They are all alike with their stock in trade, their whines, their plea, their artful endeavor to work up one's sympathies; and I move on through the darkening twilight of a bitterly cold New Year's eve, until the sound of a persistent "stump, stump" beside me, and the sight of a pair of eyes, hollow, yet radiant, lighted suddenly into starry reflectors by the coming of their owner into the glare of an electric lamp, cause me to stop at once.

It is a girl, I preceive: a girl upon crutches. Her rags are manifest, her cloak a farce; a tattered bit of wool is wound about her head, and in each naked, red hand is grasped the cross-piece of a rude crutch.

"Buy my last paper, 'm? All about—" but what she says chilla me more than night winds. From her blue childish lips comes s glib enumeration of crimes no child should know—crimes from which a seasoned sinner might well recoil—intelligence of most satanic nature—and yet I feel that her own utterances touch herself no more for harm than do the foul waters the waxen petals of the lilies they upbear.

"Who are you, child?" I ask.

"Crutchy. Won't you buy my last paper?

"Yes; but that's not enough. I—I—" stammering, because I feel that I am about to do one of those very foolish, impulsive things imputed by my little world at large—"I should like to buy you.

"Me?

"Yes. Are you for sale, Crutchy? "Not reg'lerly acrost a counter, 'm," rejoins Crutchy, in quick response to the suspicion of drollery in my mood. "It's as 'u'd be sold, 'm, if you was to buy me. I'd go dirt cheap, though, and willin'.

"It's a bargain," I laugh, and down the street we tramp together.

"He'll be glad if I never come back," vouchsafed my new possession. "He hates me. Men allus hates women, doesn't they.

I glance down at Crutchy in surprise. But my surprise vanishes as I note the child is older than I thought—a great girl, in fact, but not in stature.

"Who is 'he,' Crutchy? The clerk to whom I must render the payment for my new purchase?

"He's gran'dad; but he can't sell me. 'Sides"—and the starry eyes close sufficiently to twinkle—"he'd be too drunk to make change!

I am already glad that I have bargained for Crutchy. My intuition never fails me, however mad, at times, my impulses seem. I like my new little bundle of ready reponses; but how about Keith?

Keith laughs, when st home at last, I tell him what I have done; calls me all sorts of fond, nonsensical names, and, a little later, leaves me with my "odd idea" to go to the club.

"You'll not stay long, Keith?" I ask.

"Can't promise, dear, really. There are a lot of fellows of the legion to be on hand to-night—

"Of the legion, Keith—that old Parisian mob?

"Hot its "mob" You're not jealous of the legion, are you, little woman?

I am. But pride will not allow me to be candid. Let him go to legion—am I not his first thought for all those gay Bohemians?

"Cántholi has s new idea"—all things to Keith are, in some sort, 'ideas,—and he means to parade it. "Big canvas—weird subject—'Ring of Death,' or something of the sort.

"I like your style so much better, Keith.

"What—'The willows green, the pebbles white, the stream a line of glimmering light?

"For shame, Keith! Where did you find that, you—

"On the floor. Debris from your desk, I presume. Allow me to continue: 'The low hills wrapped in purple mist; the mountain tops the sun has kissed—

"Keith! Keith! go to your legion—are you utterly without heart?

"She asks me that who captured it! Oh, come, little woman, the rhymes are not so bad. I've heard worse.

Keith sleeps so late next morning that I have time to make a pilgrimage to a bazar where ready-made clothing is obtainable, return with divers packages and trick out the floatsam washed to me by destiny's waves from the ocean of life, before my husband makes his appearance.

As he enters the room I call [illegible] and formally introduce her to my lord and master. She lifts her great, bright eyes, and, it would seem, takes his measure at a glance. My senses being keen, I instinctively feel that Keith does not impress her as I have hoped—as I have been sure—he would. As if to find an answer to my unformed question in his face, I look at him. God help me!—the answer is there—speaking from the dull, bleared eyes, from the lax, unsteady lips, from the red, bloated cheeks, from the breath—but let what I have named suffice!

"Odd little beast—comic—make good model!

"Keith!

But the eyes have closed before my cry is ended. With a moan I turn and kneel before Crutchy, her arm around me, my head pillowed upon her hollow little breast.

From whence came that mysterious influence that brought together two atoms for mutual good—Crutchy and me? In the house, the days, the weeks that pass, no mother could console me as does this crippled child. The hideousness of inebriety is no new thing to her. Her face is a barometer. I fall to reading, and confident am I that hope is near if a smile be in the ascendant.

It is smiling often of late, for Keith is working pretty hard upon a new picture. Crutchy is his model. When his hands are firm and steady the bright eyes grow in radiance, and all their dazzling beauty is caught upon the canvas; when they tremble and lose their cunning then Crutchy comes to me, and there's nothing I can do but bless my little New Year's gift.

My small inheritance is all gone—Keith's money nearly so, and shorter commons than those to which we've either of us been ever used, is quite the order of our present day. Our last domestic tic takes her leave, and Crutchy and I vie with each other in the culinary art.

"Rice is cheap eatin,' and a slice o' toast. Tea's to excitin' to the nerves—

"And depressing to the purse, eh, Crutchy?

The picture is finished. Keith takes it to the exhibition and comes home elated. It is accepted and will be put upon the line. The demon of strong drink had not been seen for several weeks. Crutchy's face is aglow with happiness, and I am coming to my old, gay self, much as a storm-blown vessel rights herself upon a calming sea.

"Our idea" is the center of attraction in the great art exhibition. Crutchy's pictured eyes go to the heart of a certain dealer. Keith, though offered a pretty penny, holds to a fixed price, and one night brings the great sum home with him.

"My little woman shall have her old servants back again; and Crutchy shall have her wheeled chair," cried Keith, flourishing a fistful of bills.

Full of our joy, we women indulge in a little dissipation; steaming coffee, and such chops as Keith affects, are set upon our lately frugal board.

"And what color shall be the upholstering of the wheeled chair, Crutchy?" asks our hero, helping himself to another juicy chop.

"I must sleep on that," says Crutchy, the quaint.

"On the color of the chair? Ha! ha! Well, little woman, it's not everybody that has so many thousands in the house over night—indeed, it isn't the safest thing imaginable to entertain this sort of a visitor—did outsiders but know of it! However, I've been carefully frugal, and we're comparatively safe. I'll put it all—save this fiver—in the desk upstairs, and to-morrow I'll bank it, bright and early. And now I must leave you. Promised to meet my benevolent patron at the club, and talk over a new idea.

"Ke—" but I close my lips in time. I should be a criminal to suggest such an awful possibility as has flown like a devil into my brain. "Good-by, old boy, and do not stay too long sway, for Crutchy and I are a slim battalion to cope against any burglarizing foe.

That long, long night my searching hand touched an empty pillow. Keith does not come home. The morning dawns. Crutchy crawls downstairs, looking white and haggard; evidently she has slept as little as have I. At noon we hear the stopping of a vehicle; my husband is brought home. We pay the men for their services and turn to face our grief. The money has been too much for him—his gaining friends too seductive; we see it all, Crutchy and I, and sit there, silent in our anguish.

Next morning Keith tells the story that we, being women, intuitively know. He gropes his way upstairs, sober, sad, suffering, and has not had time to cross the room when—may heaven save me from ever hearing the sound I now hear —there comes a shriek that resembles the cry of a lost soul. I rush up the stairs, while Crutchy follows slowly.

"It's gone! The money's gone! I'm robbed! I'm robbed.

I fall upon a chair, stunned; nor do I seem to awaken from my stupor for hours and hours. Officers of the law, detectives, all who can aid in the search, come and go—s baffled lot. The money is not to be found, nor any trace of it. But the shock and my apathy arouse my husband. Like one touched by s powerful battery, he springs into new life, and swears by all that he holds holy and dear, to have done with strong drink. And I know that he means it.

But Crutchy grows thinner, as the days shorten; and when the sun enters Libra, I feel that the frail teanement will hold her but a little while longer. She feels it, too, and, nestling close, tells me of her gratitude.

"I could not do much for you, dearie," thus she pet-names me, "but what I could, I did. And when I die—"

"O, Crutchie," I wail.

"I want you to promise me to put something in my hand. I hope I'll live till New Year's dearie, 'cause somehow it 'u'd mean more then. If I die afore, and it ain't too long, keep me till New Years, dearie, if you can.

I scarcely hear, so great is my grief; but recollect, afterward, what I now promise her.

"And, then, the last thing, dearie, open my Grimm's Fairy Tales, and you'll find something that I've wrote there.

"She lives until New Year's eve. I allow no hands but mine to touch she dear, misshapen body, but place it, myself, reverently to rest.

With choking sobs I bid Keith fetch the book she loved so well; and as he goes to my bidding, I place the satin bag she asked for in her nerveless hands.

Keith comes to me, at last, and together we open the message from the dead, and read:

"DEAR ANGLE UPON EATH. I stoled the money. Yoel find it in the Satten bag I toled you to putt in my Hand. I stoled it cause I was frade your heshon would kill hisself with so much money to spend for drink. I was goan to kepa it til naw years and than giv it back and make him promus to d.s Right, take it Now and tell him how it was. god bless you bothe.

"from "CRUTCHY."

HUNGRY TRAVELERS.

An Odd Experience on a Lofty Plateau in the Pyrenees.

Pedestrians less hungry than Hector France and his friend might have been intimidated by by the forbidding aspect of a man whom the found sitting in front of his solitary house on a lofty plateau in the Pyrenees. With Castilian gravity and reserve he showed no surprise at seeing them, and refused to see or give them food and lodging. His wife joined him, and said that if the strangers did not stay to talk, but went right on, they would reach an inn before dark.

But this Spanish reserve was not so impenetrable as it seemed, as the travelers soon discovered. They saw, too, that some degree of indifference might rationally be expected of persons who could cheerfully live so remote from the world.

"Here we are, and here we shall stay," said my friend Martiniere. "Do you always treat passersby in this way?"

"Passersby? There are none. Where should they go? To Estelle. There is a road thither. Except for the mountain priests, no one has passed except the two Frenchmen four years ago."

"But that was I!" cried Martiniere. "I and an English friend. We stopped here to cook our game. Do you remember me, senorita?"

The senorita examined his face and exclaimed, "Truly it is he!"

Then they drew us into the house. The husband took off our knapsacks, the senorita hastened to get supper, and the children came smilingly out of the corners where they had hidden. Wine, bread, milk, eggs, garlic, preserves, [illegible] they offered us, and they wished to kill a chicken to make a soup, and also to cook an omelet.

An old figure in dilapidated clothes, a man about seventy-five years old, appeared at the door. The children to meet him. "Father," they cried, "there are the Frenchmen!"

"It is the priest," said our hostess.

"Ah, Frenchmen!" said the old man. "I knew some Frenchmen in the time of Louis Philippe. He was a good man. I have heard that he is dead."

"Yes, he has been dead a long time."

"And the emperor?" asked the priest?

"Which emperor sre you speaking of—Napoleon I or Napoleon III?" I replied.

The good man stared in amazement. Then he said- "I do not care to talk politica. I know nothing about them."

He had never seen a railway, had hardly of late years been down to the village below, but forty years before he had visited Rome, and advised us to go there.

"What do you here, father?" we asked.

"Oh, I have my mass, my rosary, my garden and my bees. You must come and see my bees," he said.

"And what does the government pay you?"

"Sixty douros (about sixty-five dollars a year."

"Ah, then you must save a good deal!" The sarcasm passed unpreceived.

"No, I spend it all," he answered. "I pay for my board with these good people, and what is left I give the children. — M. France.

At a Quaker Wedding.

No clergyman is needed at a Quaker wedding because the happy principals perform the ceremony themselves. This is the formula repeated by the the bridegroom at a recent wedding: "Friends, here, in the presence of the Lord and in the divine presence, I take this, my friend, Edith Mary Hanbury Aggs, to be my wife, promising, in the fear of the Lord and with divine assistance, to be her faithful and loving husband." The bride repeated a similar declaration, the certificate of marriage was signed by witnesses, short addresses from Scriptural texts were made, prayers were offered, and the ceremony was ended.—Exchange.

The Politician as an Actor.

There are multitudious small things which, as a little man, one would suppose must press heavily upon an eminent politician. He must be civil to all men—civiler perhaps to the fools than to any. The fools he has always with him—always. The eminent politician must serve as the especial butt to a vast and wonderful array of bores. How he must despise the large majority of his so-called followers! With what scorn he must regard them in his heart! And yet how he has to go out of his way to solicit the favor of their vote and interest! How he has sometimes to palter with a lie—he must have! How he must be all things to all men!

He is an actor as much as any actor than ever trod the mimic stage, and be he sick or sad he has to give satisfaction to the audience in front, if he would keep his situation. He has to struggle and strive to keep in his hands the ends of fifty different strings which are being pulled in fifty different directions, and preserve his balance and his head amid them all.

And what is the end of it? What is the reward of the eminent politician? It is when one considers this question that one is amazed to think that any man should think it worth his while to pay the penalties of political greatness.—All the Year Round.

A Faded Bunch of Violets.

"I know a mother out in the west end who has many household treasures," says a St. Louis minister, "but above all her silver and china she cherishes most a little picture frame, not more than four inches square, which contains a faded bunch of violets with a dead Marguerite and a white bow of ribbon for a centerpiece.

"It is an insignificant piece of furniture, but it represents to her one of the most hallowed memories. Many years ago a beautiful baby was born unto her, and after a few years of joy and sunshine it passed away. As it lay in its tiny coffin, the sunshine of an autum days gilding its already golden hair, somebody placed in its waxen fingers a bunch of sweet violets, with a Marguerite and a bow of white ribbon. Before the funeral day the flowers drooped and faded, and the mother took them and put them in a little frame.

"Probably it wouldn't signify so much to you and me, but no man will undertake to say how much love and hope and ambition lie among those faded flowers."—St. Louis Republic.

The Use of the Right Foot.

That the right foot is, like the right hand, ordinarily more mobile and at the same time stronger than the left might be attributed to the more frequent exertion on this side, were it not that the peculiarity is said to extend itself even to the constitution, and the left extremities are asserted to be more liable to disease than the right. The more difficult movements in stage dancing are usually executed with the right foot, and it is generally considered that unless double practice be accorded to the left leg an ungraceful preference for the right will be shown by the dancers in their public performance.

Most people tread more firmly with the right than with the left foot. There seems to be a greater capacity for propelling the body with the right foot; from this the horseman springs, with his left in the stirrup, and unless left handed no boy in his play hops naturally upon his left foot.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Telephone in Roumania.

The telephone has appeared in Roumania, but it is not yet a success because of an official order that, when a person desires to telephone to another city, he must arrange with his correspondent to be at the instrument at the fixed hour and minute. The rule is said to be rigidly enforced.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The largest sum ever paid for a dog was that given by the late "Fritz" Emmett, the actor, who paid $5,000 for the largest St. Bernard in the world. The dog's name was Plinlimmon.

THE Providence Advertiser is a new one in the field, and, by the way a very good one. It is a paper that should receive the endorsement of every citizen in Webster county. Col. Bishop who is pushing this new venture is a capable writer, and we hope to see him meet with success.

THE Louisville Commercial says: "The country newspapers in discussing the miserable World's Fair fiasco, vehemently ask, "Will Kentucky be there?" We hope Kentucky will not be there unless she goes decently clad and furnished. If Kentucky is in it with pants up to the knees and her coat slit up the back and her hat mashed in, she had better stay out. Nothing less than $100,000 will make a creditable show and nothing less than this ought to be voted."

AN odd financial genius in New York has $160 in 13 banks. He has a balance of $50 in one, while his account is overdrawn in several others. He was summened to appear in one Court, but not answering, an officer was sent for him and found him attending another Court. His explanation that he could not be in two Courts at the same time saved him from being fined for contempt. A man who can overdraw his account in six banks at the same time ought to be able to attend several Courts simultaneously. Otherwise he may have trouble —Cincinnati Post.

BROTHER E. G. BISHOP of the Providence Advertiser thus ventilates himself, telling in his peculiar way his trouble to his numerous readers. "The first issue of all new papers is usually gotten out under difficulties, but we have had to encounter obstacles this week that we have never met with before in all our experience as a printer. We failed to secure any help, and the entire work from editor to devil, including soliciting, has been done by one man. Besides, we were compelled to wait on the copy for some of the advertisements from one to three days, thereby disarranging our plans for presswork, and causing extra labor and delay. We have been mad—in fact, between a fuss and a fight—all the week, but are in a perfectly good humor to-day, and at peace with all mankind. So there is positively no danger in calling at our sanctum, either on business or social matters. Come right along."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23, 1892.

The man who wrote "The Vacant Chair," a ditty to which the spinets of our grandmothers used to jangle, must have had in his mind's eye a vision of Congress a few days before the holiday adjournment. Though it did little, the Senate remained at its post with the consistancy of a Roman sentinel who took an ash hath at Herculaneum, but the floor of the House was pitted with empty seats as though it had a small-pox of absences. The exedous was due to to the knowledge that little of importance could be accomplished before the January reassembling. With this certainty members found it hard to resist memories of home with sparks from the yule log flying up the chimney, the faces of the children about the fire, the stockings, the laughter, and the terrific dreams of blue winged goats and pink-tailed orang-outangs that come after the late dinner of turkey cranberries, cheese and mince pie. By ones and twos they have slipped away north, south, east and west.

It is not generally known that the Treasury and Navy Departments have been working in harmony with regard to the placing of revenue cutters on the great laces. A bill to supply two cutters passed the Senate some time ago, but was so as to provide for only one. The measure was to have been considered in the House a day or two ago, but was postponed owing to the lack of a quorum. By the passage of this bill Congress can meet any movement of Great Britian, for the plans which have already been drawn propose steel vessels capable of armament in case of emergency, are of the exact length and depth to pass through the Welland Canal. Besides this, they will be provided with coal bunkers large enough to carry fuel for steaming 3,000 miles. It will thus be seen that this government has not been idle during the talk of placing English revenue cutters on the lakes, and if the policy of the administration is carried out, the term "revenue cutter," will be but another name for a thoroughly equipped war vessel, well armed, swift of speed, and the equal of any vessel that England can either build on the Canadian shore or transport through the canals from the St. Lawrence to the lakes.

The Republicans in the Senate have a "steering committee" that will clash swords with the similar committee of the Democrats and an effort to foil them in their endeavor to secure the election of a United States Senator in the doubtful Northwestern States. This committee has held two or three meetings and has come to the conclusion that while it cannot offer the States of the Northwest any material relief, it will keep itself in shape to protect the interests of the people when the matter comes before the Senate for action. A member of the committee said yesterday afternoon that it was the intention of the committee to keep track of the situation in the questionable States and be informed as to the real condition of affairs, so that in case of contests, which will no doubt come before the Senate, they will be as fully equipped to make the fight for the seats as the Democrats, who say their committee is organized for the same purpose.

There is little reason to doubt that the President will soon issue an order extending the civil service law and rules so as to include all the letter-carriers and clerks in free-delivery postoffices. These offices now number 601 and give employment to about 11,200 carriers and 9,300 clerks, making 20,500 in all. Postmaster General Wanamaker, in his last annual report, strongly recommends that this be done. During the last year or more, and particularly during the last few months, the President has received a large number of petitions from the free delivery office asking for the extension, and it is believed that he has fully determined to issue the necessary order.

There is a great demand for copies of the Blue Book. While this book does not contain especially interesting reading, yet as it gives the list of all persons, except those in the postal service, holding office under the government and their pay, it is presumed by the officials of the Interior Department that the unusual demand at this time has some connection with the approaching change of administration. It is stated that the demand comes mostly from the Southern States, and that people in Texas show a special desire to get copies of this book. They are furnished cheerfully when the letters contain $1.40, which is the price of the book.

Senator Blank was discussing with Secretary Charles Foster the financial situation, and incidentally drifted into emigration and quarantine matters. In connection with the latter the Senator, who stands high in the Democratic party, inveighed against what he called the inhumanity of the quarantine people ca Fire Island in preventing the landing of the Normania's passengers. "I'm inclined to believe that 90 per cent of our people are crazy, anyway," said the Senator. "I think the last election proved that," responded Secretary Foster, with a merry twinkle in his eye.

There are some Democrats who seem to think it would be a good thing for Mr. Cleveland to launch his administration by disregarding the mandates of the voters. Is the President-elect so strongly intrenched in the affections of the people as to justify such a course.

One of the most singular accidents that ever occurred on a railroad took place last Monday morning at Hopkinsville. The cab of the passenger engine that runs between Hopkinsville and Nashville caught on fire in some mysterious manner, and before the flames could be extinguished the engine was so badly crippled that it had to be sent to the shop for repairs.

Last Friday night while Dr. F. W. Hall, of Adairville, was walking across the track at Edge field Junction, a train unnoticed by him which was backing up, ran over him and inflicting such wounds that he only lived a short time afterward. His remains were interred in the Odd Fellow's Cemetery at Madisonville, under the auspicies Masonic lodge at that place.

Fireman James Kilroy says he had a thrilling experience one day lately. The engine that he was on and the bill engine at Baker's were unable to hold a train of twenty cars that they were taking down the hill, therefore the speed they made down the hill was calculated to make one's hair stand on the end. The engines remained on the track and but little damage was done.

The wreck that occurred on the main stem, near Edgehehl Junction, was one of the worst that ever happened on the L. & N. system. Two engines were almost entirely destroyed and seven persons seriously injured, two having since died. The trains at the time the collision took place, were running at a high rate of speed, and so great was the concussion that the noise from it was heard for several miles. The blame for this accident seems to rest on the dispatcher who gave an order to the operator after one of the trains had passed. Too much censure should not be heaped on the dispatcher who, no doubt, if he could have given his life to have avoided the accident, would have done so. It was simply a slip of the memory and no human is free from making errors and when we look at the responsibility resting on the shoulders or rather the brain of a train dispatcher, it is a wonder that more serious accidents do not occur.

A Noted French General.

Very few people are probably aware of the fact that General Dodds, the commander in chief of the French expedition in Dahomey, is a quadroon. He was born in 1842 in Senegal, on the west coast of Africa. His father was a French merchant, his mother a mulatto.

He is tall, of slight build, with a thin face. His moustache and goatee are black, and his close cropped hair is curly and in appearance like that of a negro. His skin is very dark, and his face is tanned from years of exposure in Africa. He is a man of culture and energy, and has received the commission of brigadier general in the French army. He is just the man needed to command the African troops of France in Senegal and her other southern possessions, and to make war against negro potentates.

General Dodds graduated from the National Military school in 1863 with the rank of second lieutenant of naval infantry. He was made first lieutenat in 1867, captain in 1869, major in 1879, lieutenant colonel in 1883 and colonel in 1887. His entire active service, with the exception of two years on the Isle of Bourbon, on the southeast coast of Africa, in 1867-8, and two years in Tonquin, in 1885-6, has been in Senegal, where he has continually worked to enlarge the boundaries of the French colony. General Dodds expected to be made governor of Senegal as soon as he had earned the rank of general.

From all the engagements in which he has taken part—and he fought through the Franco-German war, the commune and the Tonquin campaign—he has come out unscathed.—New York Sun.

Dr. Dollinger on Tobacco.

Driven into an inn by a shower in one of his walks, the late Dr. Dollinger, of Germany, was greatly annoyed by the conduct of some young men, who swore at the weather, smoked, and called impatiently for beer.

"Tobacco and alcohol are demonical powers," said Dollinger, half in jest and half in earnest. "Smokers are barbarians. The eternal smoking of pipes and cigars by our forefathers doubtless helped to bring about the short sight which has now became hereditary in Germany. Tobacco smoking is the ruin of society and of chivalrous conduct toward women."

Only one docking reported and that was on Tuesday when Geo. Toy skated into an air-hyle on the lake. Basids a good watting, he escaped unharmed.

The mails for the past few days have been the heaviest ever handled in this city. Postmaster Farnsworth was equal to the emergency, and is not a candidate for the office under the incoming administration.

For pain in the stomach, colic and cholera morbus there is nothing better than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by St. Bernard drug store. Earlington; Ben T. Robinson, Moriona Gap, and Geo. King, St. Charles.

Miss Mary Kale, the 16-year-old daughter of Thos. Kale, of Central City, was burned to death Christmas eve. Her clothing caught fire from lighted candles on a Christmas tree. Her body was burned to a crisp, and presented a ghastly spectacle.

Will P. Scott was in the city Monday, and informs us that he has no intention whatvaar of again entering the newspaper business, but will shortly take a position as commercial tourist for a clothing house in Louisville. He is also interested in a recent purchase of a drug store in Central City.

W. H. Overby, Postmaster at Henderson, was attacked on Monday by Dennis O'Calahan and received a painful cut in his left arm. The assaulting party escaped. The trouble grew from a Christmas present O'Calahan's wife had received. The irate husband took for granted that Overby was the Santa Claus in the case, hence the assault.

Since Saturday last skatars have been having genuine sport on Lorb Mary's smooth surface. Skating has never been more enjoyable than it has been this recent freeze. A smooth surface of nearly 100 acres, as Loch Mary affords, is not to be found in every community. Earlington people are proud of their lake and of the amusement it affords at all seasons of the year.

An Owensboro paper tells the following on one of the street car drivers of that city "Owensboro streets at their best are not much to brag on, and the last few days of alternate freeze and thaw, snow and rain, have not helped their condition any. Some day a lady living on one of our worst and most frequanted thoroughfares stepped a car, it was quite muddy at that point, but to go further was to face worse. The driver got off the car, and after answering to pack down the mud into something like solidity, and finding it a failure, set his foot in the mud and said "Lady if you will step on my foot you can get on the car without getting muddy."

Thanks.

The teachers and pupils of the public school desire to express their sincere thanks to the people who aided so much in making the supper a success, and also to those who gave them the free use of the hall. The amount raised was about $26.

The School Supper.

The supper given by the children of the public school at Masonic Hall, last Friday night was a much enjoyed and well attended. The receipts were upwards of twenty-five dollars. The purpose of the supper was to raise funds with which to purchase an organ for the school. To the children, their teachers and mothers much praise is due. Meeting with the success they did, they will, in the near future, give a concert, that they may have money enough to make payment in full on an organ already purchased.

New Postage Stamp.

The postmaster general has decided to issue what will be known as the Columbian series of postage stamps under a contract signed recently. Jail Delivery in Clarksville.

Last Wednesday night five prisoners, Harry Jones, house-breaking; Bailey Winters, Jas Rinehart, horse-stealing and William Allen, escaped from the Clarksville jail and are still at large. These prisoners together with one or two others were confined together in a large iron cage in the second story of the jail. A wooden key made from a piece of broom handle was used in unlocking the upper padlock. The cearer lock was opened by means of a key made out of an oyster can. The door was then pressed open and the five men passed out of the cage. Blankets were tied together and used as means of lowering themselves to the ground, a distance of twenty-five feet. Avant and the other two prisoners were offered a hand in the escape but they refussed to enter into the plot. They were then told that if the secret was divulged they would be killed on the spot. The men stole Avant's shoes and seventy cents in cash, which he had to buy tobacco, before leaving—Kantuckian.

A Sad Death.

Shep Ashmore passed away at his home, three miles south of Madisonville, last night.

Again our community has been invaded by the remorseless reaper once more we mourn and mingle our sorrow, and offer our sympathy to a bereaved family in a sore affliction.

Shep Ashmora was a well-to do farmer of the St. Charles community, and died at his home at 5 n'clock p. m., Friday, December 23, 1892. Deceased was confined to his room for several months with that dread disease, consumption, where he laid in a conscious state until death came to his relief. He leaves a helpless mother, 92 years of age, and four children to mourn his loss. He was about 50 years of age.

Shep Ashmore was a noble man, a true gentleman, and in his death the community has lost one of its best citizens. He was a gentleman of vigorous intellect of wide and varied accomplishments, his ready mind stimulated by worthy ambition explored many of the most unfrequented fields of literature, and had drank deeply from the fountain of scientific lore. His society was sought and enjoyed by most cultured people, he was a member of the Christian church, with which he connected himself many years ago. While we deplore his loss, we extend to his family our profound sympathy, and pray that they and we may like him prepare for the great beyond, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest

IT IS A FACT

That Christmas comes but once a year.

That avan if it was Xmas ava the law shouldn't have been violated—but it was.

That it was cold when this was written, no matter how hot you are when it's read.

That one young society man in town wears a big bill the colors of the rainbow, as the result of too many falls on the ice while skating.

That our police pulled 'am for gettin drunk. Whether drunk on Madisonville or Henderson whiskey it made no difference—Five dollars and costs.

That true love goes sometimes by contraries. Your wife whips you when you're drunk. She has no occasion to do so when you are sober and sensible.

That some Tom, Dick or Harry was naughty and went "kerwhollop." Somebody's grandfather merely tossed him over the counter. No bones broken.

That the wrecker was not called out to remove the obstruction found on the track near No 9 tip, on Sunday afternoon. The obstruction, however, was taken home by hand and put to bed.

That an inquiry for Christmas games and the prizes thereof was answered by the affable clerk that the ladies would have to call again in the morning, as that was the time farmers generally came to town.

That a young grocer on "Wall street," this city, used an Irish potato for washing, instead of soap, the three days preceeding Christmas. When told what he had been doing, he said he had saved that much soap by the operation, a fact no one disputed

That Marshal Barnett is never at a loss where to put his man. When asked to quiet a drunken man on the train last Monday he stepped on board and shut his man up in the corner of the smoking car, telling him he would be released when he reached his destination.

SHOT IN THE HEAD.

The Colored Citizens of Hanson Enliven Things With a Shooting Affray.

The colored people of Hanson had a Christmas tree at their church last Monday night. All went merry until Sam Hutchinson and his wife engaged in a war of words over some trivial matter. Hutchinson and wife have been at outs for some time, and several months ago while he was employed as a section hand on the railroad, his wife refused to live with him for some unknown reason

Their meeting last Monday night gave rise to a quarrel, and Hutchinson becoming enraged, drew his pistol and deposited a bullet in his wife's tampa.

Dr. Hayns was summoned and pronounced the wound dangerous

County Attorney Waddill went down Tuesday to investigate the affair. Up to that date the woman was living, though it is more than likely that the wound will prove fatal.

KILLED BY THE CARS.

Dr. W. F. Long, A Highly Respected Citizen of this City, is Horribly Mangled at Edgefield Junction.

Dr. W. F. Long, well and favorably known in this city and whose family has resided here for some time, met with a sad accident last Friday evening, which resulted in death. The doctor was formerly a resident of Adams, Tenn., and upon rising up the practice of medicine, became a traveling salesmen.

At the time of this accident, he was at Edgefield Junction viewing the debris of the recent wreck at that place. In attempting to cross the tracks to have his baggage checked, was run over by a train which he failed to see backing in and was run over by same, cutting off both legs near the hips. Amputation was found to be necessary and the family was telegraphed immediately.

They left on the first train but before they reached him he had passed away. This was one of the saddest death that has occurred for some time, inasmuch as he was on his way to enjoy the holidays with his family, and they cordeserve the sympathy of all citizens

ILSLEY

Judge Salmon was in Dawson Friday.

John Miller was in Dawson on the 23rd.

Mrs. John Harland went to St. Charles on the 22nd.

Santa Claus came direct from the clouds and made a great success.

The Major distributed the shekels narly on Christmas eve, and all Ilsley was happy.

There will be no school this week as Miss Mattie Daves will spend the Holidays at home

The Christmas tree was beautiful as a dream, and the ladies evidently understand the art of decorating.

L. Stokes came down from Powderly to spend Christmas with his relatives. Rumor hath it that when next he comes he will be a married man.

Scott Carroll makes a genial host refreshments without costs and meals at all hours at his house. But how can he help being good when he is a full brother to our great and only Col J. N.?

Our W. H. Cook says he has seen a good many Christmas trees in his lifatime, but he wants to say that never did he see one that was so well conducted or gave such general satisfaction as ours.

Jos. Lacy, Wm. Cook and A. T. Bone went to see Uncle Billy Williams, way up on Buffalo in the Dargen country. Of course they had special business, we suppose it was Christmas business.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Salmon were in Earlington and Madisonville the latter part of last week, and the Christmas tree bore ample evidence of their trip. Mrs. R. M. deserves the highest praise, for never was a small an amount of money laid out to such good advantage.

Our Col. Carroll went to St. Charles on the 24th, where he took part in a family reunion. The brothers W. H., David M., Geo. W., J. N. (our Colonel), N. B. and David S. Carroll were all there and with their numerous circle of acquaintances made a fine party. At least 100 persons were present and they could all dance. The party "We danced all night till broad daylight and went home with the girls in the morning."

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Lacey entertained Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Bone, Bud Ridley, wife and daughter, Nola, Wm. H. Cook and family, Jake Perry (alias Jack Jakeson), Mrs. Lute Bone and family, Mrs. Deason Hall and Miss Lizzie Harland. The dinner was given as a compliment to the Masonic brothers of the host. As well as we can learn it was a very enjoyable affair and the guests all speak highly in praise of the host and hostess, and say they wish Christmas would come often if it would always bring such pleasant times

B. F. Farrow, painter and paperhanger.

We are sorry to hear of the death of one of R. R. Lovan's children, which has been sick for some time. Kind parents, weep not for its soul is now with its Maker, and its body is consigned to mother earth.

The committees appointed to attend to the Xmas tree deserve great credit for the manner in which they performed their duties, as it was a grand success. There were over 600 people to witness the distribution of the numerous presents.

R. D. Gatling and Miss Sallie O'Briant, and Jno. Davis and Miss Georgia Lovan eloped to Springfield and were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony. We extend to these young people our hearty congratulations and trust that they may grow happier as time goes by

B. F. Farrow will do your painting and will do it right.

CHARLESTON.

Our neighbor Ilsley had a tree loaded with beautiful things.

Our own dear Jake was fairly carried away with Christmas.

Everything just "a freezin" hereabouts—so cold it can't help it.

This section of Hopkins County is all right if the year 1892 is about leaving us.

Our girls are not to blame, so they say, that this year has nearly left them and they are still unmarried.

We wished our Crabtree friend of the pin quill a merry Christmas, and here's two to one that he had it.

Some of our people ought to go to Hopkinsville to see Sam Jones, and I guess they'll be going—some of them.

What will be done New Years? The "red-eye" gave out Christmas. The demand far exceeded the supply, it is said.

Where is there another little city our size that can show up more guns on a Christmas? If anywhere, it is over about Dargen.

The grand ball Christmas eve was simply immense. The illuminations about the building were gorgeous and some of the dancers—most all of them were lively.

Our merchants were fairly gutted—that is their stores were gutted of Christmas tricks which they had laid in for the holidays. Everything met with a ready sale.

Ed Phillips was the guest of Oscar Caldwell Friday and Saturday. He returned home Sunday.

Oscar Caldwell visited friends in Earlington Friday, and brought his friend, Eddie Phillips, home with him.

The entertainment at Mr. Robertson's was a grand success. There were 42 people there and all had a pleasant time. Now-Elton, we want another just like it.

Mr. Shep Ashmore, an old and reliable farmer, has departed from this world, and, we hope, has gone to one far beyond the skies where sickness and sorrowing never comes. Mr. Ashmore was about 54 years of age, and was sick for a long time with consumption and catarrh. The remains were placed in the cemetery at Crayton's school house on Sunday eve.

LITERARY NOTES.

The "Twice-a-Week" St. Louis Republic is unquestionably the best and cheapest national news journal published in the country. It has led the fight for Tariff Reform and stands without a rival as the leading representative Democratic paper of the United States. It is issued each Tuesday and Friday, fourteen to sixteen pages every week, for only one dollar a year—a great semi-weekly paper for the price of a weekly. It gives the news at least half a week earlier, and much more fully than any weekly. Everybody should subscribe for it now, and get the news, fresh and complete, during the closing months of the Republican administration, as well as the inauguration of Cleveland and Stevenson, when the Democratic party will be in absolute control of the Executive and Legislative Departments of the National Government. An extra copy will be sent free, for one year, to the sender of each club of four new subscribers, with four dollars. Write for free sample copies, and raise a club. Address the Republic, St. Louis, Mo.

A notable story, "Reiteration," from the pen of Miss Dolly Higbee, author of "In God's Country," and other well-known writings, appears in the January number of Fetter's Southern Magazine, (Louisville, Kentucky, Fetter & Shober). This sketch, while dealing with the city negro (vastly different from those of the country), gives the quaintness and true characteristics of those two types of Ham whose attempts to woo the love and hand of the fair charmer, Milly, are depicted in a highly humorous style

Mollie Had a Little Ram.

Mollie had a little ram as black as a rubber shoe, and everywhere that Mollie was, he amigrated too. He went to the church with her one day, and folks hilarious grew, to see him walk demurely into Deacon Allan's pew. The worthy Deacon quickly let his angry passions rise, and gave it an unchristian kick between the ad brown eyes.

This landed rammy in the aisle, the deacon followed fast, and raised his foot again, alas! that first kick was his last. For Mr. Sheep walked slowly back, about a rod 'tis said, and ere the deacon could retreat, he stood him on his head.

The congregation then arose and went for that ara sheep; several well directed butts just placed them in a heap. Then rushed they straightway for the door, with curses long and loud, while rammy struck the hindmost man, and shoved him through the crowd.

The minister had often heard that kindness would subdue the fiercest beast. "Aha" ha said, "I'll try that game on you." And so he kindly, gantly called: "Come rammy rammy ram; to see the folks abuse you so I grieved and sorry am."

The ram quite dropped his humble air, and dropped from off his feet, and when the parson landed ha was in the hindmost sent, and as he shot out the door and closed it with a slam, he named some California town I think 'twas "Uba Dam."

D. P. S.

B. F. Farrow, artistic house painter and paper hanger, formerly of St. Charles, has located permanently in our midst, and is prepared to suit the taste of the most fastidious. He is a practical workman and all work left in his care will be properly done.

MINING BEES.

Important business called Dan Umstead to Evansville last week.

Foreman Robinson spent Christmas with his family and friends here.

Albert Robinson and family spent Christmas with friends near Dawson.

Superintendents Salmon and Crutchfield were called here on business last week.

Civil Engineers Robinson and Evans did some surveying last week for the St. Bernard.

Some scoundrel, it is thought, set fire to a mine in Alabama, last week, which endangered many lives.

Robert Calloway carried his hand in a sling for a few days last week, having been cut by a piece of slate.

The burning mine at Summit Hill, near Mauch Chunk, Pa., has been on fire since 1858.—Scientific American.

Our coal dealers were in a happy frame of mind the past week, rendered so by a favorable change of the weather.

It is rather strange that so many rely on the contents of a jug filled with whisky to make them enjoy their holidays.

Capt. Bascom and crew were the victims of a game of freeze-out the past week, and have therefore laid aside their trowels for the present.

The mayor of Louisville, in behalf of that city, has ordered that 10,000 bushels of coal be distributed among the poor during the holidays.

Some delay was caused one day last week, at the mines, by a car being derailed, which received prompt attention by the railroad company.

The St. Bernard Co. has commenced the shipment of coal to Chicago, Ill., where the demand for this excellent quality of coal is rapidly increasing.

For the last few weeks Paul Moore has spent a good portion of his time at Evansville, looking after the interest of the St. Bernard company at that place.

The scarcity of coal cars deprived our miners of some work last week, and it is a singular thing that the better the demand is for coal the scarcer the cars are

Dan Umstead thinks that with good luck and hard work he can have the new machinery being put in at St Charles in running order by the first of the year.

The St. Bernard company are making some valuable improvements at their saw mill, and with the addition of a new saw will have one of the best in the country.

Judging from the nice condition our boys, most of them, returned from Madisonville, last Saturday, they intend turning over a new leaf soon, and reform, which is a step in the right direction.

After having spent a merry Christmas and a happy new year, our boys, no doubt, will enter upon their year's labor renewed vigor and with a determination to do better work and more of it.

All the Coal Companies stores in the county was crowded last week with buyers, who warn seeking those things calculated to make their families and friends happy. An immense amount of money was invested in presents this year.

A lot of Homestead strikers are now making appeals for aid from outside sources. They quit a job several months since that paid better than anything in sight in Kentucky. Winter is now on, they failed to save anything and as a result they are in distress.

It is thought that more turkeys were devoured by our miners here this Christmas than ever before on one holiday, and it is safe to say that every family in their employ will enable them to partake of the good things of this earth, and that it is not only the rich that can enjoy life.

James Crenshaw, of the Hecla Coal Co., met with a painful accident last Saturday. He was driving some cattle when the horse he was riding fell with him, falling on his leg, bruising that member badly, and it is feared that sometime will elapse before he is ready to be at his post of duty. Dr. Jones was called in, and at this writing he is resting easy and is slightly improved.

While our Kentucky legislators cannot muster up enough courage to even pass a bill rightly, which will appropriate the paltry sum of $50,000 toward a World's fair exhibit, Indiana has had the good sense to increase their amount to about $200,000, and there is no doubt about this State being so rich, if the affairs are rightly managed, as Indiana, and it is a shame that two states such a great deal apart.

If it is right to administer a dose of medicine to boys for doing wrong, men who are supposed to be better qualified in every way, should no doubt receive a larger dose of the medicine they prescribe for the rising generation, and we give below the treatment the boys sometimes receive at the hands of their superiors: "The strike of the runners and drivers at the three Eagle mines, near Eagle Collieries Oliphant, come to an end to-day, after lasting but twenty-four hours. The runners and drivers are all boys, and were, no doubt, influenced in striking by dime novels. They went out against the protest of the miners. By their action 1,400 men and boys were thrown out of employment. The miners promptly hold an indignation meeting and sent a committee to wait upon the boys and they would see to the securing of boys for running and driving purposes. This satisfied the company and forced the boys to return to work, after their parents had soundly spanked a number of the boys.

The Princeton Banner, among other good things, has the following to say about the mineral resources of Lyon county: "Last, but not least in the list, is the question of the existence of mineral deposits of the county, which are rich and varied. Chief among these deposits, of course, is iron ore, the manufactured iron of Lyon county having achieved a world-wide fame, the wholly, not to the process of converting the crude ores into marchant bar end plate, but to the specific qualities innate in the ore itself. These specific qualities are the wonderful ductility and tensile strength that are imparts to the finished iron. Hillman's boiler plate iron, which was manufactured in this county, became noted, not only throughout the United States, but in Europe, and wherever introduced was found a wonderful power of resisting hydraulic and steam pressura. That these specific qualities are inharant in the ores of the county out of which this iron was manufactured, has been clearly and scientifically demonstrated by attempts elsewhere to make, by the same process, and with equally well skilled labor, as good iron, which invariably proved altogather abortive. These ores deposits are rich and practically inexhaustible, and must contribute largely to the future growth and wealth of the county. Besides the iron ora, there are deposits of lead, silver, flour-spar, mica, etc. There can be no doubt but that a few years hence than those of Lyon county, from the common brick clays to the finest Kaolin, and the anaply is quite abundant and invites investigation from the burnt clay manufacturer."

IMPORTANT DEAL IN KENTUCKY COAL, IRON AND OIL LANDS.

In the last week a very large deal was made that will cause the immediate development of one of the richest mineral and timber sections of the State. The land conveyed by the deal places the Kentucky Consolidated Oil and Natural Gas Company, limited, in possession of 100,000 acres in fee and lease-hold, located in Wayne and adjoining counties, covering the most promising oil field in the South Eleven wells have been sunk on the property, all of which are producers; one or two having been tested showed a pumping capacity of 30 barrels per hour.

This is one of the most important enterprises ever undertaken in Kentucky, as the laying of a pipe line twenty-five miles long, erecting oil refineries and building a long line of railroad are projected, and will be put under immediate construction. Complete surveys have been made and estimates prepared at heavy cost showing the amount of capital necessary to complete these undertakings, and right of way has been secured. The company is officered by men of wealth and extensive experience in handling large enterprises, who have acquired a knowledge of this property by years of careful study and actual development which has proven that they control one of the most valuable properties in the country.—Industrial American.

The Inhabitants of Mars.

We know that the tribes upon our earth which live under the most favorable conditions as regards heat—the Eskimos, for instance, and the Patigonians—are far behind the inhabitants of the temperate regions in civilization, and therefore, if we may draw any inference at all as to the Martials from our own condition, the more probable inference is that, if they exist under circumstances at all like our own, they are considering their great distance from the sun, centuries behind us rather than at the stage of evolution, or, still less, centuries before us

And if we have no right to draw such an inferance, then we have still less to reason with the smallest confidence from our own circumstances to theirs. They may of course have senses such as we have not even a dream of, they may be perfectly well acquainted with all that happens not only on our globe, but on all the other planets, and yet quite unable to let us know that they are familiar with our conditions of life and how they have acquired that knowledge. But if that were so it would be only too obvious that our conditions of life furnish us with no basis for forming any conjecture at all as to their, and in that case it would not only be sanguine but quite irrational to attempt to open communication at all

The only shadow of justification for making such an attempt rests on the assumption that we may reason from the analogy of our condition to theirs, and on that assumption we think it would be only prudent to assume that, if such faculties as ours are already developed on the surface of Mars at all, they are likely to be behind instead of far before our own.—London Spectator

A Highly Prized "Tip."

An amusing anecdote is related of the Archduke Joseph of Austria. While walking in his park he encountered an old countryman in full pursuit of a truant chanticleer. The archduke joined the chase, captured the cock and handed it over to the old man, who promptly expressed his gratitude by presenting him with a twenty kreutzer piece. The archduke will prize this tribute as much as the late Sir John Holker prized the sixpence given him by a rural elector whom he showed over the house of commons, and who mistook him for an attendant.—New York Tribune.

A Roundabout Story.

"Did I ever tell you about Lafe Sheffer's boots?" asked a gray-haired engineer in the group at the roundhouse, whom all addressed as "Frenchy." "No? Well I was running out of Grand Island on the Union Pacific in '72, when Lafe was master mechanic there. He was a big man, Lafe was—the most powerful man I ever saw. He stood six feet eight inches in his stockings, and was built in proportion; he was double-jointed all the way through, and he didn't know his strength

"His voice was like a bass drum; and when he asked it seemed as if he was hollow down to his boots. Those same boots were, some, I can tell you; they were number sixteens, and had to be made to order in Omaha.

"The general manager got hold of a pair of Lafe's new boots once, and had them put in a box car, and the car sealed up and billed to Lafe at Grand Island. Some supplies were expected at that time, and when this car came the yard men put it on the turn-table, and Lafe had it rolled into the roundhouse to unload.

"When he unlocked it and opened the door, there was the boots—nothing else! That hit Lafe pretty hard; but the same day, he was standing on the turn-table, just before the whistle blew for dinner, and the wipers came out and turned the table round so that he faced the boarding house.

"'What are you doing?' says Lafe.

"'Turned you round, sir, so you could go to dinner,' said one of the wipers

"'Get your time and leave,' said Lafe. He was furious. The men left, but Lafe took them all back the next day.

"Lafe hadn't a single tooth in his head, and he could bite—"

"How's a man going to bite if he don't have any teeth?" interrupted a fireman.

"If you keep your mouth closed and your ears open you may learn something," said Frenchy. "I said he hadn't a single tooth in his head—they were all double ones, sound as ivory and strong as steel. What he couldn't bite couldn't be bitten."—Youth's Companion.

Money Lenders in Europe.

The continental monts de piete had their origin in the Italian monti di pieta, large numbers of which were founded in Italy throughout the Sixteenth century, and the objects of which were, in the first instance, essentially charitable, the avowed purpose of the institution being to counteract the injurious effect of usury by lending money on deposits at an almost infinitesmal rate of interest. The Franciscan monks were the first to lend money on goods, and in 1515 they were allowed by the pope to receive a moderate rate of interest; but in process of time the Italian monti di pieta became extensive banking corporations, which were occasionally plundered or half ruined by forced loans exacted by tyranical princes, and sometimes brought to entire collapse by injudicious financial speculation.—London Telegraph.

FATTENING POULTRY.

Two Weeks Will Make the Birds Fit for Market.

Two weeks is sufficient time in which to fatten fowls for the market. But this demands conformity to certain conditions. The fowls should have full liberty. At this time it is not economy to give them opportunity for exercise. It is desirable that all the food taken should be used to make fat, not for strength of muscle. From eight to twelve may be shut in a small room together, where there will be nothing to disturb them. If the room should be partially darkened, all the better. Let the birds have complete repose; let all their powers work toward digestion. The quickly fatted fowl is tenderest and most juicy. If no suitable room is available, a large coop may be constructed, with feeding troughs outside.

It is important that the feed should be clean, sweet and abundant. For this reason it should be placed so that they will not run over it or defile it. The object is to have the birds cram themselves, sit down quietly and digest, then cram again and so on to the end of the chapter. Now if they are confined in a coop having a tight bottom the place will soon become intolerably filthy. There should be openings or wide spaces in the floor, that it may be cleaned often, then covered with sawdust or some suitable litter. Kept in this condition the fowls will take four squa meals a day.

If re should be a quarrelsome one in le lot it should be separated from the rest. Such a fowl will pi . the others from eating to the full, and disturb the quiet which is necessary to the rapid digestion of the food. Fighting tends to leanness. Even scolding will use up food and prevent an oily, rotund condition.

There is no better food for fattening purposes the world over than sweet, finely ground cornmeal wet up with skimmed milk. The mixture need not be so dry as when meal is mixed with water. is no danger that fowls will get waterlogged on milk. Some poulterers feed buckwheat meal, thinking that it renders the poultry better in flavor. There is no objection to mixing one-third buckwheat meal with the cornmeal as a change. The mixture should be seasoned with a teaspoonful of salt each day. Fowls that have dough for their rations will not require much water, yet fresh, pure water should be supplied, that they may drink when they thirst.—Poultry World.

Piles or Hemorrhoids.

This uncomfortable disease is the direct result of constipation. The hard matter in the intestines rresses upon the veins, and finally engorges them in certain places with blood. Whosoever has suffered from piles knows how painful and troublesome they are. To cure them we must abolish the cause, which is constipation. The patient and intelligent use of Carlsted's German Liver Powder will do it. In old and chronic cases some little time may be required, but the good result is sure to follow. Price 25c at Robinson Bros.' drug store.

Consumptive Cows.

Of all the human deaths that occur in the world it is reasonably estimated that one in seven is due to consumption or tuberculosis, and at least 3,000,000 persons perish from it every year out of the population of the globe. The recent remarkable development of bacteriology has directed special attention to the infectious nature of the disease. While in a majority of cases the fatal infection is derived from human beings afflicted with it, it has been amply demonstrated that in many cases it is conveyed to man from tuberculose cows through the medium of milk.

Although in large cities precautions have been taken to prevent or curtail the sale of adulterated, watered or skimmed milk by means of lactometer tests, there is no practicable method of detecting the milk of consumptive cows after it has reached the city for delivery to consumers. Those who buy can therefore be protected only by sanitary supervision of the dairy herds at sources of supply and by the eradication of the disease among them.

Investigation has shown the existence of tuberculosis in some of the dairy herds that supply milk to the large cities in the eastern states. The most notable inquiries of this kind have been those recently made in the neighborhood of Boston under direction of the health authorities of that city and of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture. These revealed the prevalence of the disease on dairy farms in many towns which sent milk to the Boston market.—Rural New Yorker.

The laws of health are taught in the schools, but not in a way to be of much practical benefit and are never illustrated by living examples, which in many cases might easily be done. If some scholar who has just contracted a cold was brought before the school so that all could hear the dry, lond cough and know its significance, see the thin white coating on the tongue and later, as the cold developed, see the profuse watery expectoration and thin watery discharge from the nose, not one of them would ever forget what the first symptoms of a cold were. The scholar should then be given Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely, that all might see that even a severe cold could be cured in one or two days, or at least greatly mitigated when properly treated as soon as the first symptoms appear. This remedy is famous for its cures at coughs, colds and croup. It is made especially for these diseases and is the most prompt and most reliable medicine known for the purpose. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by St Bernard drug store, Earlington. Ben T. Robinson, Morton's Gap; George King, St. Charles.

Live Stock Points.

It was well known that there was an epidemic of glanders in the stables of n New York street car company during the past summer, and it was remarked at the time that there was criminal carelessness in the conduct of those having charge of the stables. The horses that died were dumped into the city dead horse delivery with the rest. The consequence was that a young German, who skinned one of those glandered beasts, caught the disease by the virus from the horses body getting into a small sore upon his hand. He died in horrible agony a few days after, with unmistakable symptoms of glanders. When a horse dies of glanders burn his body and don't stop to skin it.

Ewes bred in November will bring lambs in March. But the ewes must be thoroughly well fed and cared for from the time of breeding till the lambs come. Unless the sheep owner can give this care and has warm quarters for the March lambs and knows just what to do with them, it is better in the northern part of the country to have the lambs come in April.

Now look out. Just after the secretary of agriculture has officially proclaimed there is not a case of pleuro-pneumonia in the country is the time for it to appear in some out of the way farm down in nowhere. But the fact that the disease is apparently stamped out is gratifying, showing that the mutual labors of the government and of breeders throughout the country have not been in vain.

Few of the incubator men can raise eggs enough at home to keep their machines going, so that raising eggs for the incubator is fast becoming a trade by itself.

Some of the most experienced physicians in America, where the chills, fever, ague and kindred diseases are most common, recommend Yucatan Chill Tonic as the safest, surest and quickest remedy. Price 50c per bottle, at Robinson Bros. drug store.

About Flies.

One of the most aggravating things to a person of good sense is the method employed in dealing with flies. They are useful scavengers, and if they would limit their inroads to places where they are needed they would do good service. Unfortunately, however, when they once come in force they often prevade the most cleanly homes. One of the most successful methods in dealing with flies is to hang up some herb or plant which is offensive to them and not offensive to the residents of the house.

Sweet clover, which grows plentifully by the roadside and has a faint, pleasant odor, unobjectionato any one not afflicted with hay fever, has the reputation of being abhorred by flies. A few sprays of this plant hung in the parlor or a a cluster of the sweet, white, tassel-like heads as a boquet on the center table, will do more work in ridding room of flies than a dozen fly traps.

There is considerable doubt whether any trap that contains molasses, sugar or any such material does not draw more flies than it kills, besides being a disgusting and uncleanly way of meeting this nuisance.

A son of Mr. M. D. Fusser, a merchant of Gibraltar, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism for a year or more as to be unable to work or go to school. His father concluded to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm on the boy. It soon cured him and he has since walked one and one-half miles to school and back every school day. 50 cent bottles for sale by St. Bernard drug store, Earlington; Ben T.
